IT BEATS THE RECORD.

The Speed of a Man's Beart Pulsations Puzzles the Doctors.

William Wiggins, a cook, 35 years old, who is now at the City hospital, St. Louis, has a heart that is a record breaker. The average heart, as is known, beats at the rate of about 70 pulsations per minute, while that of Wiggins amuses itself by spinting along at the speed of 212 beats each 60

And yet he does not die, and therein lies the peculiarity of his case. Other hearts have been known to take sprinting spells, but when they have reached a speed of about 150 pulsations to the minute they have usually gotten tired and have stopped indefinitely. Not so with Wiggins. After a speedy spell his heart usually stops completely for a short period. It has always started

Where $50,000 was expended in one place, $100,000 was soon invested in another, and so it went on until Olympia capped the climax with a $2,000,000 build-

Multiplication of theaters meant a compound increase of the sharpest managerial rivalry. Ten dollars a week performers gave way to a list of $50 a night "artists." Actors were ly read some of Wagner's poems and fought for by competing managers, who carried the battle into the European "specialty" markets, and salaries leaped higher and higher, until Mile. Guilbert was brought over to the Olympia at $4,000 a week, only to be followed by Chevalier and Loie Fuller at Koster and Bial's on a salary and a percentage equaling probably that Even at these salary outlays enormous profits were made on all these early engagements. Any one of the three you choose to name played to over $10,000 a week, and the managers were in the heyday of their prosperity. But the tide has turned, and it is an open secret that many well-known managers are in water well up to their chins.
